

Ground Rules for Training in a Group

This training course is designed for those who will be working with volunteer groups in community media projects. The participants are approached as a group in which:

1. all individuals have equal status
2. individuals are committed to the group's tasks and goals
3. individuals complement one another's skills and abilities
4. individuals have group-oriented and task-oriented roles
5. individuals have the ability to express their opinions and make decisions in mutual agreement
6. individuals share similar backgrounds and / or values which can emerge if all are willing to seek a common denominator within the group.

Overview of course week:

Monday / Tuesday	media communication and self-expression
Wednesday	digital skills and networking
Thursday	about teaching and learning
Friday (two parts)	(1) societal and legal framework of community radio / developing an understanding of roles and self-organisation within media initiatives
	(2) importance of evaluation within training courses